2. Messaging from Headlines to Home

Presenter: Suzi Bouveron, MPH, Health Education Consultant III
California Department of Public Health

Suzi shared a news segment that featured the story behind the tragic loss of one-month old Jaxon Rodgers, who passed away from pertussis. Although the mother was vaccinated for Tdap during her third trimester, it was toward the end and there may not have been enough time for the vaccine to take effect and protect the baby. SDIC wanted to send the message that the Tdap vaccine should be given at the beginning of the third trimester.

The group then engaged in a brainstorming session to discuss what more we could do in our organizations and daily practices:

- If you refer a patient for a Tdap, follow up to make sure she got it
- Use standing orders
- Front desk staff can remind patients, especially pregnant women, to get their Tdap
- Make sure your EHR/IIS is programmed to flag patients needing a Tdap
- Moms should feel empowered to tell family members, child care workers, and others to get their Tdap
- Use reminder/recall system
- Insurance companies can send reminders to patients, e.g. in their newsletters
- Be specific with timing, e.g. “at the beginning of your third trimester,” instead of giving her a range
- Incorporate reminders and info into prenatal classes
- Promote Tdap and give information wherever women go for health services, e.g. family planning clinics
- Update clinic policies and protocols
- Hold community forums
- Use compelling images, such as a jet refueling mid-air (sample image to the right)
